Subject: China - new data requirements

Hi Rick,

We learned that the Chinese authority, ICAMA, has established new regulatory requirements. One of the requirements is that all studies need to be performed in laboratories approved by the Chinese Ministry of Agriculture unless a Mutual Acceptance of Data (MAD) exists between countries. There is some possibility that China would sign onto the OECD MAD in which US is already a signatory. Do you know if EPA has had any discussions with ICAMA on establishing a MAD between the US and China?

Appreciate your input.
